IIT’s Social and Economic Development Policy program is designed for global thinkers and future change-makers—people who want to make the world a better place. Whether your policy passion area is local politics, poverty reduction, international relations, or something else entirely, IIT’s degree will prepare you to make an impact.

A degree in Social and Economic Development Policy will help you hone your knowledge of how globalization is impacting your local community and vice versa. It will equip you with the skills needed to work on the front lines of public policy development, opening doors to careers that are actively engaged with the social, economic and environmental policy issues of today and tomorrow. You will also focus on the role technology plays in alleviating poverty, as well as how technology shapes economic competitiveness.
THE IIT ADVANTAGE

Studying development policy at IIT, which is most well-known for its technology-focused programs, offers you the unique opportunity to collaborate with your friends in engineering, architecture, computer science, business or life sciences. Our interdisciplinary approach culminates in the Interprofessional Projects Program (IPRO), which brings together student teams from across disciplines to solve a common problem. With technology playing an increasingly central role in our daily lives, having this hands-on collaborative experience gives our students a big advantage in the job market.

Not to mention, living in the heart of Chicago is an extraordinary education in and of itself!

“"My generation hasn’t seen the effects of globalization hidden from them. I think a lot of people want to make a difference. I have been able to travel to Nicaragua and actually talk to members of the community to define what their needs are so that we are designing a project for them and with them. That community will see an improvement that will change their lives for the better with our help. Only IIT could give me that opportunity.”
